A compound sentence, according to STRUCTURE, is a sentence made up of TWO or more independent clauses that are connected by punctuation or conjunctions. Diagram compound sentences in the same manner as simple sentences except show the connection between the clauses. When a compound sentence omits to use the conjunctions and, or, nor, but, yet, or for (FANBOY) between clauses add a semicolon between them in the diagram.

Subject Noun And Predicate Verb

He ran; she walked.

Tip: When and, or, nor, but, yet, or for (FANBOY) are used between the clauses of a compound sentence, place the conjunction on the line between the clauses.

He ran and she walked.
A complex sentence, according to STRUCTURE, is a sentence that is made up of ONE independent clause AND ONE OR MORE dependent clauses.

- Put a dependent noun clause on a stilt where it would go as a subject or object and write any subordinating conjunction on the stilt line.

Subject Noun And Predicate Verb

- Where he went is known now.

Adjective Clause

Draw a line to a dependent adjective clause from the noun or pronoun (antecedent) that it describes to the subordinating conjunction.

subject noun | predicate verb

subject noun | predicate verb | direct object

subordinating conjunction

Walsh, whose biography you have read, has died.

subject noun | predicate verb

The phone rang when I sat down.

Draw a dotted line to a dependent adverb clause to the predicate verb that it describes and write the subordinating conjunction on the dotted line.

subject noun | predicate verb | subordinating conjunction

subject noun | predicate verb

The phone rang when I sat down.
A compound-complex sentence, according to STRUCTURE, is a sentence that has TWO or more independent clauses AND one or more dependent clauses. Again, simply connect the different phrases with their conjunction, subordinating conjunction or semicolon.

John watched; but, when night fell, the soldiers returned.
