

Name: _____ Date: _____

Sentence Construction Linking Verb:

A linking verb joins, or links, a predicate to a subject and to make an assertion, positive or negative. All linking verbs carry some sense of the verb "be".

I am ready.

You are quick.

He is old.

She is energetic.

It is expensive.

We are warm.

You are many.

They are helpful.

Name: _____ Date: _____

Sentence Construction Linking Verb:

A linking verb joins, or links, a predicate to a subject and to make an assertion, positive or negative. All linking verbs carry some sense of the verb "be".

Day is bright.

Mine is red.

Yours is blue.

His is green.

Hers is pink.

Its is brown.

Ours are old.

Yours are new.

Name: _____ Date: _____

Sentence Construction Linking Verb:

A linking verb joins, or links, a predicate to a subject and to make an assertion, positive or negative. All linking verbs carry some sense of the verb "be".

Theirs are finished.

I was here.

You were there.

He was late.

She was early.

It was ready.

We were warm.

You were cold.

Name: _____ Date: _____

Sentence Construction Linking Verb:

A linking verb joins, or links, a predicate to a subject and to make an assertion, positive or negative. All linking verbs carry some sense of the verb "be".

They were hot.

Globes are round.

Wolves are hungry.

Petals are soft.

Flowers are pretty.

Clouds are water.

Skies are clear.

Storms are noisy.

Name: _____ Date: _____

Sentence Construction Linking Verb:

A linking verb joins, or links, a predicate to a subject and to make an assertion, positive or negative. All linking verbs carry some sense of the verb "be".

Trees are resources.

Children are little.

Giraffes are big.

Tomatoes are red.

Books are read.

Children are eager.

Parents are hopeful.

Families are havens.